NEHALEM HAS A PLEA ASTORIA MUST LISTEN

And a cry came up from out of Nehalem!

For years the rich and beautiful valley of Nehalem has suffered for the want of one good, wide, well-built highway to the gates of Astoria; and for those same years this city has suffered, all unconsciously, however, the annual loss of a magnificent volume of varied produce from this same splendid fertile country. The deprivation has been mutual. But there the affinity ends. Astoria has been deaf and unconcerned. Nehalem, on the contrary, has been deeply concerned and not at all inactive. The farmers and hop-planters, the stockmen and fruit-growers and dairymen, have been building roads of their own, lateral and main, to a point best known as the site of the old Mishawauka post-office, and while they builded, they sent in plea after plea to the merchants and authorities of Astoria for help in the construction of the main artery hence to the network of roads they have put in down there; but their energy has outrivalled that of the "City-by-the-Sea," and now that these determined and eager people have exhausted their general road and bridge funds (as well as the 10 miles extra allowed them by law annually, taxing themselves cheerfully, year by year, in order to open up a natural and convenient market in the very city that should have been the first to recognize the big values in such a tributary country. They are, at last, at the end of their tether, and if they get relief from what is, to them, an intolerable situation, it will come from this end of the road. Astoria is to be called upon in unequivocal terms, to take, or reject, the largess offered by these people; and put her municipal and commercial shoulders to the wheel of progress, or pursue her indifferent way and abandon a near and natural source of supply for all the standard products amenable to this soil and climate. The people of Nehalem, through a representative committee, intend, at an early day, to approach the common council, and chamber of commerce of Astoria, to champion their claim for 20 miles of road before the honorable county court of Clatsop, and if this aid and influence is denied them, the responsibility for the irreparable loss that must be sustained by all parties to this crying blunder, will rest with Astoria, and the shameful consequence will be the gradual abandonment, by the people of Nehalem, of all allegiance to Astoria, and a market, less accessible, more remote, but still possible, will be sought and attained. Astoria must think, and act, invoking every medium in her possession to capture, and retain, the profitable tribute so long offered her, and, by her, so long ignored.

With their accustomed vim these same Nehalemites contributed very largely to the exhibits in the Country Fair that has been such an accession to the regatta festivities here, one entire side and wall of the exhibition being given up to their contributions, and an inspection of the list below will show the brawn and brain of Nehalem in force at the fair.

And by the way, this same Country Fair will be kept open today, from 1 o'clock to 6 p. m., a concession permitted by the committee in charge, to those of Astoria's citizens, who, by reason of steady employment during the past week were unable to devote any other time to the interesting display.

Chairman Bowly of the fair committee has compiled the following list of contributors and exhibits, a perusal of which will be of exceeding value to those who are taking a definite interest in this (to be) permanent adjunct to Astoria's annual regatta:

MONEY RATES FIRM

Peace Does not Bring Higher Prices.

MARKETS ARE ON DECLINE

Although the Conclusion of Peace at Portsmouth Was a Feature of Week in Stock Market, Its Reception Was Disappointing to Many.

New York, Sept. 2.—The event at Portsmouth was the feature of the week in the stock market. Its reception was, however, disappointing to those who expected that higher prices would come with peace. The market maintained its reactionary attitude and material declines, resulting largely from forced liquidation, were the rule. Rumors of forthcoming loans by Russia and Japan in this country have not taken form, and are regarded as remote contingencies. The demands of the hard coal miners affected the coal shares and gave a hint of possible trouble in the spring. Money rates show a hardening tendency, although loans for mercantile purposes were renewed during the week at easy rates. The interior demands for crops, reports concerning which are generally favorable, have created some uneasiness because of the low bank reserves.
